Part A:

What are the issues that you consider most important for young people and in dealing with them decision makers must pay more attention to the opinions of young people? (closed question like in the previous rounds)

(1=Not important, 5=Very important)

- Self-image and its presentation online
- Stereotyping and gender discrimination online
- Internet safety and privacy
- Living in stress online
- Access to information online, fake news (better phrasing?)
- Digital activism (explain this term?)

Optional (to be added?):

- Future of employment in a digital world
- Changes in education in a digital world

Have we forgotten very important issues? If so, please add here:

Part B – alternative 1: In-depth questions

Please share with us your ideas related to the above issues. Please refer to at least 3 issues that you considered most important in part A. (Open question, free text answers)

1. Self-image and its presentation online

Does your online activity improve or harm your self-image? Why?

2. Stereotyping and gender discrimination online

Do the Internet and social media have mainly positive or negative impact on stereotyping and gender discrimination? In what way?

How can we fight stereotyping?

3. Internet safety and privacy

What are the main problems for young people regarding safety and privacy online? (Examples: cyberbullying, spreading personal info and photos without consent).

How can online safety and privacy improve?

4. Living in stress online

Do you feel sometimes stressful when you are active online? Why? What is the main cause of stress related to online activity? How can it be alleviated?

5. Access to information online, fake news

Can you distinguish between reliable and unreliable information online? How? What changes are needed to address this issue?

6. Digital activism

Do you take part (or wish to take part) in digital activism? How and about what? Do you think digital activism can bring positive changes to society?

Optional :

7. Future of employment in a digital world

Do you think that advancements in technologies like computers, AI, robotics, “Internet of things” etc. increase or decrease the prospects of today’s young people to find fulfilling employment in the future?

8. Changes in education in a digital world

Is the current education system adequate to the digital society? If not, what are the main necessary changes?

Part B – alternative 2: General questions similar to Delphi1

Q1. What are the best ways to engage young people like yourself in decision-making?

(1 Not at all useful, 5 Extremely useful).

1. New representative bodies such as “youth parliament”
2. Participation in committees, interest groups etc., together with adults
3. Direct communication between young people and decision makers
4. Utilization of existing “students’ councils”, youth organizations etc.
5. Fostering active groups in schools/universities/workplaces and recognition of the activists
6. Shared projects of self-responsibility (with family, school, etc.)
7. Using technologies in participatory processes (including online surveys, voting, etc.)

Other ways (please add):

Q2: In what way will the society in the year 2030 be better if the voice of young people like yourself is heard by decision makers?

(1 Strongly disagree, 5 Strongly agree)

1. Fairer society: More tolerance, equality, openness to different genders, cultures, religions, political opinions, controversial issues...
2. Young people will feel more confident, expressive and in control of their role and impact in the society they live in.
3. Society will be more adapted to changes.
4. Better education system
5. Significant increase in innovation and production, thanks to the high creativity of young people
6. More integrated and responsible youth, having a greater sense of belonging
7. The society will not be better.
